A national Executive must also be ~~provided~~ provided. I have scarcely considered as yet to form my own opinion either of the manner in which it might be be constituted or of the authorities with which it might be clothed.

An article should be inserted expressly guaranteeing the tranquility of the States against internal as well as external dangers.

In like manner the right of coercion should be expressly declared.
With the resources of Commerce in hand, the national administration might always find means of exerting it either by sea or land; but the difficulty & awkwardness of operating ^{by force} on the collective will of a State, render it particularly desirable that the necessity of it might be precluded. Perhaps the necessity on the laws might create such a mutual dependency between the General and particular authorities, as to answer this purpose. or perhaps some defined objects of taxation might be submitted along with commerce to the general authority.

To give a new system its proper validity and energy, a ratification must be obtained from the people, and not merely from the ordinary authority of the Legislatures. This will be the more essential as in roads on the existing constitutions of the States will be unavoidable.

The enclosed address to the States on the subject of the Treaty of Peace has been agreed to by Congress, & forwarded to the several
